Cycling is a popular pastime on Arran. Not only are there the island's main roads around the coast and the 'string' across the middle of the island.

In the south of the island, there's a nine mile long cycle route from Whiting Bay to Kilmory, which cuts through the forest. It's a good idea to gather local information before setting off, either from the Tourist Information Office in Brodick, or from Forest Enterprise - sometimes, if tree felling is going on, it may not be possible to travel the whole route.
